E-Safety: Fortnite - getting bigger and bigger

Musical.ly has gone - or has it?

If you hoped the furore over the most popular game we saw last year was going to go away any time soon, I'm afraid it isn't. Towards the end of the school holidays the Android version was being released, meaning we'll see more playing. Don't forget, Fortnite is just a game, it's the Battle Royale element that concerns most people, mainly due to the intensity of the very short 20 minute games. Battle Royale isn't exclusive to Fortnite, lots of other games have it too. And guess what's supposed to be coming out in late September - Call of Duty Battle Royale (18 rated).

As many of you will know, the app Musical.ly is an incredibly popular live streaming app with approx. 100 million users in Europe and the USA. During mid-August the app disappeared, but not altogether. User accounts have been ported over to another app called TikTok. This app has also been around for a few years but it was predominantly used in Asia with approximately 500 million users. This means there is now a combined user base of approx. 600 million users so advise your staff to keep their ears open.
